FINE DINING

A symphony of beautiful shapes

New edition of a classic

Going beyond all short-lived trends, the “Fine Dining edition” advanced collection continues the puristic creed of its predecessor Fine Dining. However, with carefully chosen finesse, it successfully manages to fuse together the contrasting stylistic worlds of timeless classicism and modernity in a harmonious way.

The extravagant character of the new items sets fresh trends and enters into a subtle dialogue with the existing range. Familiar shapes provide a surprising touch with unusual proportions. The unique range opens up countless possibilities for combination. An inspiring invitation to engage in free experimentation.

A symphony of beautiful shapes

In combination with the round elements, the angular shapes in the Fine Dining edition open up highly expressive fields of contrast. The special charm resides in the charming combination of strictly geometric plates and delicately curving hollow parts. The pronounced handles add a sensory touch to the gracefulness of the shapes.

The claim of multifunctionality is lived up to right down to the finest detail. This means that the cups fit on both the round and square saucers beneath.

The discovery of clarity

A delicate thin body, a clear, timeless shape – this would be one way to describe the personality of this classic. The very first time you catch sight of it, the delicate handles and the generous rims attract your attention. They provide a respectful setting for the magical moment of presenting the finest cuisine. An aesthetic language which made even the original Fine Dining collection strikingly different.

The supreme design is synonymous with consistent elegance – without a hint of arrogance. A homage to sophisticated dining culture and hospitality set in a perfect ambience.

Perfectly structured enjoyment

Fine porcelain has its own very special aura. With an air of proficient restraint, Fine Dining always creates a cultivated atmosphere as an integral part of an opulent dining table as well as a relaxed five o'clock tea. The simple elegance of this successful range is displayed just as well on a starched tablecloth as it is in rustic sets or when it is in direct contact with the wood of a tabletop.

The discreet classical shapes provide an effective backdrop for culinary delights without ever stealing the limelight themselves. This is quite possibly the most delightful way to spoil one's guests at any time of the day.

Interplay between colours and motifs

Fine Dining edition celebrates the return of the decorative style to dining culture. The advanced collection picks up on the splendour of bygone eras, but places it in a modern context. Despite all the extravagant delight taken in the colours and ornamental style, the decors do not in any way appear fashionably dainty or garish. Their breezy dynamism and the alternation between powerful dominant colours and soft graduations in colour remain true to the principle of clarity and the strictness of the successful classic.

The decor illustrated here shows examples of interpretations of the theme of “modern classicism”.

Virtuoso interpretations

The new show decors of Fine Dining edition are not content merely with the role of the decorative “onlooker” on the fringe of the proceedings. With their glamorous look, they are a real highlight on any table. When put together with the delicious cuisine on offer, the elegant white of the porcelain combines with brilliant colours and motif themes.

For all the love of detail, the decorative ideas always adhere to the clear overall idea. It is with virtuosity that they master the distinction between light and shadow, loud and quiet, big and small just as much as the enticing play between different proportions.

In the garden of pleasures

It is with good reason that "Royal Garden" is one of the favourites among the standard decors from Fine Dining. Hazy watercoloured branches and leaves on a delicate green background accentuate the freshness of the cuisine on offer and stimulate the diner's appetite.

Their fragile simplicity invites the imagination to dream. They tempt you to enjoy a summery lunch in the shady cool of a garden pavilion. Or how about a romantic candlelight dinner out on the terrace, with champagne and a full moon thrown in for good measure?

DECOR IMPRESSIONS

Eating habits are changing – trends come and go. But the everlasting style of Fine Dining is here to stay. And it still loves the interplay between the changing decors which are displayed with particular freedom on the wide rim of the plates. The desire for stylish enjoyment is met by high-quality decorative impressions.
